NEWBORN MEDICINE

Children's Hospital Boston's Division of Newborn Medicine provides state-of-the-art, comprehensive specialty care to neonates with a wide range of congenital and acquired conditions. Our team of trained physicians, nurse practitioners, nurses, respiratory therapists and other health professionals provide supportive, family-centered care in a technologically cutting-edge environment. The division's expertise spans the care of extremely premature infants to the care of term infants with a variety of medical and surgical illnesses.

We have a tertiary/quaternary Children's Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) with surgical subspecialties that provides intensive medical, surgical and nursing care, life support systems, electronic monitoring, and a complete range of diagnostic and therapeutic capabilities.

The division has expertise in the following areas:

- congenital anomalies
- genetic disorders
- hyperbilirubinemia
- hypoglycemia in the newborn
- metabolic disorders
- pre- or perinatally acquired infections
- prematurity
- pulmonary hypertension
- respiratory distress/chronic lung disease
- surgical conditions

CLINICAL PROGRAMS:

Newborn Medicine Community and Academic Program Affiliates

Newborn Medicine's Community hospital affiliates care for ill and convalescent newborns in convenient, family-centered settings. Community-based Newborn Medicine faculty provide advanced newborn therapies in the Level II special care nurseries and Level III NICUs of suburban medical centers affiliated with Children's Hospital Boston. As the center of the Academic Program in Neonatology at Harvard, the Division of Newborn Medicine also shares close clinical and academic affiliations with several excellent Level III maternity-based newborn units in the Boston metro area. These institutions refer newborns to Children's Hospital Boston for specialized therapies and subspecialty services. Our Community and Academic Program affiliates include:

Infant Follow-Up Program

Designed for infants born very prematurely, weighing less than 3.3 lbs., who are at high risk for development and motor delays as well as other problems resulting from prematurity. Our program follows children from the time of discharge until they reach 3 to 4 years of age. The multi-disciplinary Infant Follow-Up team includes pediatricians, neonatologists, pediatric psychologists, physical therapists, social workers, and if needed, pediatric neurologists.

Scheduling: 617-355-6622

Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU)

A multidisciplinary team cares for critically ill newborns with a wide range of congenital or acquired medical and surgical diseases. After consultation with the referring physician, members of the Division of Newborn Medicine will arrange for transport in collaboration with the Children's Transport Team.

Children's Transport Team: 866-771-KIDS (5437)

Neonatal Intensive Care Unit: 617-355-8076

Prenatal Consultation Program

In collaboration with referring obstetricians, maternal-fetal medicine specialists, maternity center neonatologists and subspecialists in the the Advanced Fetal Care Center, clinical staff in the Division of Newborn Medicine provide counsel by phone and/or office visit to families who expect newborns with congenital conditions that will require postnatal care in our NICU.

Advanced Fetal Care Center: 617-355-3896 or toll free 1-866-FETAL-CARE (338-2522)
